

Student Champions for Climate Justice: Creating a virtual Academic Community Experience
Staff/Faculty Advisor Form

The American Public Health Association’s Center for Climate, Health and Equity advances health equity and environmental justice through climate solutions. Increasing awareness of the health equity impacts of climate change among academic communities is critical to galvanizing action from the next generation of public health leaders.

APHA’s Center for Climate, Health and Equity will select up to five college or university student groups to create a virtual Academic Community Experience during National Public Health Week (April 5-11, 2021) to highlight climate change, health and equity.

Student groups applying for the Student Champions for Climate Justice Award are required to work with a staff or faculty advisor. The staff/faculty advisor will be expected to work with the student group, provide guidance and oversight on the development and execution of the virtual experience. Please review the application materials to become familiar with the requirements for the virtual Academic Community Experience.

Please provide your information and sign the Statement of Advisor Responsibilities acknowledging your responsibilities as an advisor, should the applicant(s) be selected.

Please fill out, sign and provide a scanned copy of the signed form to the applicant(s). If you have any questions, please email Evelyn Maldonado (evelyn.maldonado@apha.org).

Statement of Advisor Responsibilities

As the staff/faculty advisor, my responsibilities include:

- familiarizing myself with the requirements of the virtual Academic Community Experience
- providing guidance and oversight on the development and execution of the virtual experience and its budget
- monitoring progress and completion of the virtual Academic Community Experience during (or close to) 2021 National Public Health Week (April 5-11, 2021)
- If needed, notifying APHA of any significant challenges, delays or if students cannot complete the virtual Experience

By signing this document, I acknowledge and agree to these responsibilities, should the applicant be selected.
